Colorado's Three Job-Killing Measures

60, 61 and 101 cost Colorado more than 73,000 jobs, a majority being private sector jobs in transportation, health care and construction. This is in addition to the 110,000 jobs already lost in Colorado due to the recession.

They cut school funding in half, forcing the termination of 8,000 classroom teachers, pushing students into classrooms already overwhelmed in class size, with the severest impact at the K-3 grade levels.
